Plot Summary

The film begins in 1841, where we are introduced to Solomon Northup, a skilled carpenter and violinist. He enjoys a comfortable life with his wife and children. However, his life takes a dark turn when he is lured to Washington, D.C., under the pretense of a job offer. Instead, he is drugged and sold into slavery.

1. The Abduction: Northup is deceived and awakens in a dank cellar, where he learns he is no longer a free man. He is stripped of his identity and dignity, renamed "Platt," and sold to a plantation owner.
2. Life on the Plantation: Solomon is sold to Ford, a relatively kind master, who allows him some freedoms. However, when financial difficulties arise, Solomon is sold to the cruel and sadistic plantation owner, Edwin Epps.
3. Struggles for Survival: Throughout his time enslaved, Solomon faces inhumane treatment, including violent punishments and the constant threat of being sold away from his family. He forms bonds with fellow slaves, including Patsey, a young woman who suffers under Epps' cruelty.
4. Quest for Freedom: The film's climax focuses on Solomon's desperate attempts to communicate with the outside world to gain his freedom. His resilience and determination become key themes as he navigates the treacherous landscape of slavery.
