Background of the Novel

Creation and Publication

Arthur Conan Doyle wrote "The Hound of the Baskervilles" after having seemingly retired the character of Sherlock Holmes following "The Final Problem," where Holmes appeared to meet his demise at the Reichenbach Falls. The public's outcry for more Holmes stories led Doyle to create this novel, which he set before the events of "The Final Problem." The story was serialized in The Strand Magazine in 1901 and was published as a book in 1902.

Inspiration for the Story

Doyle found inspiration for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from various sources, including:

- The Devonshire folklore surrounding the Hound of Dartmoor, which told of a spectral hound that roamed the moors.
- The Baskerville family history, particularly Richard Cabell, a local squire whose tomb was inscribed with tales of the ghostly hound.
- His own experiences in Dartmoor, where he was struck by the desolate landscape and the legends associated with it.

These elements combined to create a rich tapestry of mystery and intrigue that has fascinated readers for generations.
