Rutter is known for his ability to blend traditional choral styles with contemporary harmonies, making his works accessible and enjoyable for both singers and listeners. This article delves into the background of the piece, its musical characteristics, its place within Rutter's oeuvre, and the broader context of choral music.

Background of the Composition

John Rutter: A Brief Biography

John Rutter was born on September 24, 1945, in London, England. From an early age, he displayed a keen interest in music, studying at the Highgate School and later at Clare College, Cambridge. Rutter's career has spanned over several decades, during which he has become one of the most prolific composers of choral music in the contemporary classical genre. His works are often characterized by their lyrical melodies, rich harmonies, and an innate understanding of choral textures.

Rutter's compositions often draw on traditional forms while incorporating modern elements. He has worked extensively with various choral groups, and his music has been performed worldwide. Rutter's ability to communicate emotion through music has made his works perennial favorites in church services, concerts, and educational settings.

The Text and Its Origin

"Blow Blow Thou Winter Wind" is taken from Shakespeare's play "As You Like It," specifically from a monologue delivered by the character of Duke Senior. The text expresses themes of nature, the harshness of winter, and the idea of fate and fortune. The excerpt reflects on the bitterness of life, yet it also hints at resilience and the acceptance of life's trials.

Rutter chose this text for its vivid imagery and emotional depth, which he masterfully translates into music. The piece is set for a four-part choir and is often accompanied by a piano or small orchestral ensemble, allowing the text to shine through the choral writing.

Musical Characteristics

Structure of the Piece

"Blow Blow Thou Winter Wind" is structured in a way that allows the text to guide the music. The piece is typically divided into several sections, with varying dynamics and textures that reflect the changing moods of the text. The following elements are key to its structure:

1. Opening Section: The piece begins softly, capturing the stillness of winter. The choral voices enter in a delicate manner, setting the scene for the text.
2. Contrasting Middle Section: As the text shifts to more intense emotions, the music becomes more dynamic. Rutter employs rich harmonies and layered vocal lines to evoke the harshness of winter.
3. Climactic Moments: Throughout the piece, there are moments of climax that correspond with the text's emotional peaks. Rutter's use of dynamics and rhythm here creates a powerful impact.
4. Closing Section: The piece resolves gently, returning to a reflective state. This closing mirrors the acceptance of life's challenges, echoing the sentiments expressed in the text.

Harmonic Language and Style

Rutter's harmonic language in "Blow Blow Thou Winter Wind" is a hallmark of his style. His use of modal harmonies, unexpected chord progressions, and rich dissonances creates a sense of depth and complexity. Key features of Rutter's harmonic style include:

- Modal Interchange: Rutter frequently shifts between major and minor modes, adding emotional nuance to the music.
- Extended Harmonies: The use of seventh, ninth, and even eleventh chords adds richness to the choral texture.
- Counterpoint: Rutter employs counterpoint effectively, allowing different vocal lines to interact and weave together, creating a tapestry of sound.

The overall effect is one of warmth and beauty, making the piece both accessible to performers and moving for audiences.
