Early Years and Foundation

Boise State University began its football program in 1933, but it wasn't until the late 20th century that the team began to gain national recognition. The early quarterbacks played crucial roles in developing the team's identity, laying the groundwork for future success.

1930s to 1960s

During the early years, the role of the quarterback was often underappreciated, as the team relied heavily on a run-oriented offense. Some notable quarterbacks from this era include:

- Bob Dwyer (1961-1963): Dwyer led the team through the transition to a more modern passing game, showcasing the potential of the quarterback position.

As the program grew, so did the complexity of its offensive schemes, setting the stage for more dynamic quarterbacks in the years to come.
