- How to Do It:
- Start at the head and move towards the tail, applying light pressure.
- Use the palms of your hands or your fingers to glide over the fur.
- Repeat this motion several times, observing your cat's response.

2. Petrissage

Petrissage involves kneading and squeezing the muscles, which helps release tension and improve circulation.

- How to Do It:
- Gently lift and squeeze areas of your cat's body, such as the shoulders and thighs.
- Use your fingers to knead the muscle, similar to how one would knead dough.
- Be mindful of your cat's comfort level and avoid areas that seem sensitive.

3. Friction

Friction involves using circular movements with your fingers to stimulate specific areas. This technique can help relieve muscle tightness and improve flexibility.

- How to Do It:
- Choose a muscle group that feels tense.
- Use your fingers to make small circles on the area, applying gentle pressure.
- Pay attention to your cat's reactions to ensure you are not causing discomfort.

4. Tapotement

Tapotement consists of light tapping or drumming motions on the cat's body. This technique can invigorate and stimulate muscles.
