Techniques Used in Coast Goal Occupational Therapy

To achieve the goals set during therapy, practitioners employ a variety of techniques tailored to the individual client's needs:

2. Skill Development

Clients are taught specific skills related to their goals, such as time management, organization, or social communication. These skills are practiced in a supportive environment.

3. Role-Playing

Role-playing scenarios can be an effective way to practice social interactions and build confidence. Clients can rehearse conversations or practice responses in a safe space.

4. Environmental Modifications

Therapists may suggest changes to a client's environment to facilitate success. This can include rearranging living spaces, using adaptive equipment, or implementing organizational systems.
