Understanding the Concept of "Help Meet" in Biblical Context

The phrase "help meet" originates from the King James Version of the Bible in Genesis 2:18, where God declares it is not good for man to be alone and creates a suitable helper for him. The term "help meet" is an archaic expression meaning a helper corresponding to or suitable for the man. It emphasizes companionship, support, and complementarity within marriage. In biblical theology, this helper is not merely a subordinate but one who completes and strengthens the husband's role.

Historical and Linguistic Background

Understanding the Hebrew words translated as "help meet" provides insight into the nature of the relationship. The Hebrew term "ezer kenegdo" literally means "a helper corresponding to him" or "one who meets his needs." This helper is an equal partner in purpose and function, though different in role. The biblical narrative establishes this partnership as foundational to marriage, reflecting mutual dependency and cooperation.

Significance in Christian Marriage

Within Christian doctrine, the concept of a help meet has been interpreted to frame the roles and responsibilities of husbands and wives. It underlines the idea that marriage is a divine institution designed for mutual support and spiritual unity. Debi Pearl's work builds on this scriptural foundation to articulate a model of marriage that emphasizes the wife's role as a supportive and submissive partner, geared toward fulfilling God's design for family life.

Core Teachings of Created to Be His Help Meet by Debi Pearl

Debi Pearl's book Created to Be His Help Meet elaborates extensively on the biblical role of the wife, presenting it as a God-ordained calling. The book is structured to guide wives in understanding and embracing their position within the marriage covenant. It addresses themes of submission, respect, prayer, and nurturing, aiming to foster harmony and spiritual growth in the marital relationship.

Submission and Respect

One of the central teachings of the book is the biblical principle of submission. Pearl argues that wives are called to submit to their husbands as the head of the family, a concept rooted in passages such as Ephesians 5:22-24. This submission is portrayed not as inferiority but as a voluntary yielding that honors God's order. Alongside submission, respect towards the husband is emphasized as essential for a healthy and God-honoring marriage.

Prayer and Spiritual Support

Debi Pearl stresses the importance of prayer and spiritual intercession by the wife on behalf of her husband and family. She advocates for wives to be prayer warriors, supporting their husbands in their leadership roles through consistent communication with God. This spiritual discipline is presented as a vital component of the wife's help meet role, contributing to the overall strength of the marriage.

Homemaking and Nurturing

The book also addresses the practical aspects of being a help meet, including managing the home and nurturing children. Pearl underscores the value of a wife's dedication to creating a peaceful and orderly household where the family can thrive. The nurturing role is portrayed as an extension of the wife's calling, fostering emotional and physical well-being within the family unit.

The Role of Submission and Partnership in Marriage

In Debi Pearl's framework, submission is balanced with partnership, where the wife supports the husband while also exercising influence through wisdom and character. This dynamic is intended to reflect the complementary design of marriage, where each spouse fulfills distinct but equally important roles. The partnership is both spiritual and practical, requiring communication, respect, and mutual goals.

Submission as Strength

Contrary to some cultural perceptions, submission in this context is presented as a position of strength and dignity. Pearl explains that willingly submitting to a husband's leadership, when exercised responsibly and lovingly, contributes to marital unity and peace. This submission is not blind obedience but a thoughtful and prayerful alignment with God's intended order.

Mutual Responsibilities

While the wife is encouraged to submit, the husband also bears responsibilities to love, cherish, and lead sacrificially. The partnership outlined by Pearl includes mutual accountability and care. Both spouses are called to serve one another, creating a balanced relationship where love and respect are reciprocated.
