Historical Context

The Rise of Impressionism

In the late 19th century, the Impressionist movement emerged as a reaction against the academic standards of the time. Artists sought to capture fleeting moments of modern life, emphasizing light and color over detailed realism. Edgar Degas, although often associated with Impressionism, had a unique approach that blended traditional techniques with innovative ideas.

The Ballet Scene in Paris

The Parisian ballet scene was a major cultural phenomenon during Degas' lifetime. The Opéra de Paris was a central hub for artistic activity, attracting a diverse crowd of spectators, dancers, and artists. Ballet dancers were seen as both entertainers and symbols of beauty and grace, yet their lives were often marked by hardship and competition.

Degas and His Artistic Vision

The Creation of Little Dancer Aged Fourteen

Degas began working on Little Dancer Aged Fourteen in the early 1880s, inspired by his fascination with ballet and the young dancers who populated the Opéra. The sculpture was not merely a representation of a dancer; it was a study of movement, form, and the emotional depth of youth.

2. Dimensions: The sculpture stands at approximately 38 inches tall, a size that emphasizes the delicate yet strong presence of the dancer.

3. Pose and Expression: The pose of the dancer is both natural and poised, reflecting the everyday movements of a young girl in training. Her expression is contemplative, hinting at the struggles and aspirations that come with youth.

Degas employed a variety of techniques that set Little Dancer Aged Fourteen apart from other sculptures of the time.

- Realism: The attention to anatomical accuracy and the depiction of the dancer's attire reflect a commitment to realism, which was characteristic of Degas' work.
- Texture: The use of wax allowed Degas to create a lifelike texture that mimicked the fabric of the dancer's tutu and the softness of her skin.
- Mixed Media: Degas took an innovative approach by incorporating real materials into the sculpture. The original piece featured a tutu made of muslin and a satin ribbon, which added a tactile quality to the work.
